

College Human BINGO

Human BINGO is a fun, interactive activity that helps people get to know each other and have conversations about college. Use it with students in class or with staff during a meeting.

Materials

- 1 BINGO card per player
- Pen or pencil

Prep the game

- Decide which version you want to play: Oregon Colleges or College Experiences.
- Print and cut one BINGO card per player. Use both cards #1 and #2 at the same time for variety.

How to play

- Pass out one BINGO card per player.
- Players must find a person who attended the college or for whom the statements about college experiences are true. Students must find a teacher, administrator, other school staff member, and/or member of the community to sign their card.
- That person signs the box which contains their true statement. Depending on the number of people, you can specify how many times people may sign one BINGO card.
- Five in a row wins: horizontal, vertical, or diagonal.

Extension activities

- Players have a conversation about the college or experience with each person that signs their card.
- Players choose one or more of the colleges or experiences on their card and write a short essay (e.g. something they're looking forward to or basic facts about a college).
- Lead a large group debrief about the variety of types of colleges and experiences.
